#019

□ Learning..😃

“The week that passes without learning anything is considered an incomplete week.”

Take a moment to think…If an entire week goes by and we haven’t learned anything new, can we really say we’ve moved forward?

Time passed, yes — but did growth happen? That’s the real question.

Learning is not limited to degrees or formal training.A new perspective, a lesson from a mistake,a small technique picked up from a colleague —all of these are “learning” too.

Every week, ask yourself one question:“What do I know today that I didn’t know last week?”

If you get an answer — the week is complete.If not — the week just passed; it wasn’t really lived.

Friends, let’s remember:The one who keeps learning moves forward,and the one who moves forward is the one who succeeds.

This week, let’s make a resolve to learn something new —because an incomplete week…leads to incomplete progress,while a week filled with learning leads to complete progress. □